From the President

Dear Friends and Supporters,

The Center for Environmental Reporting at NorCal Public Media has had a remarkable eight years presenting TV, radio, and digital media projects that foster widespread awareness and understanding of pressing environmental issues. The Center serves as a vital platform for delivering in-depth and accessible content, engaging the public across various mediums, and providing comprehensive information, compelling narratives, and expert insights on environmental challenges, solutions, and the impact on the Bay Area and global communities.

Darren LaShelle
President and CEO

You are familiar with the TV series Bay Area Bountiful and probably with our unique radio project Ear to Wild, but I encourage you to check out our FireCast, StormWatch, and Drought Monitor web platforms that keep you informed about the climate issues that impact our everyday lives. Beginning this year, the Center will turn its focus more directly to examining climate change and how California is experiencing climate change, and searching for innovative adaptations and solutions to the challenges we face.

The Center plays a pivotal role in holding stakeholders accountable, advocating for sustainable practices, and inspiring collective action. By serving as a reliable source of information, we empower you to make informed decisions, participate in environmental discourse, and contribute to the ongoing efforts for a more sustainable and resilient future.
